Hangzhou, Beijing, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Fuzhou - Global Jet is spreading its wings over Greater China and Asia.

Whether it is by opening offices or by operating aircraft, the prestigious Geneva-based private jet company is actively implementing its company in the Far East.

The Global Jet's Asian fleet keeps on increasing: 5 aircraft are based in Asia, from the well-renowned manufacturers: Bombardier, Dassault Falcon and Gulfstream. They are now operating a Falcon 2000, a G450, a Falcon 7X, a Global Express XRS and a Global 6000. Other major projects are under process for the upcoming months.

Global Jet's successful development in Greater China was strengthened by the partnership established with the Hangzhou-based Jinggong Business Aircraft Company, part of the well-established and renowned Jinggong Group. This great combination provides the customers with the local resources of Jinggong Group and the truly international experience of Global Jet. The approval from the CAAC of the Chinese AOC will allow Jinggong and Global Jet to perform commercial flights under the Chinese regulations.

Since its arrival in Greater China in 2006, Global Jet took the time to build its project step by step. The company's goal was to make strategic decisions to properly settle in Asia. The aim was to provide the Chinese clientele with the same high-end quality services offered in Europe (Charter Sales, Aircraft Management, Sales & Acquisitions and Design & Completion) as these are Global Jet's signature.
